The California State University’s Affordable Learning Solutions Initiative has created a “one-stop shop” for faculty and students to find and use no or low-cost course materials from MERLOT/OER, digital library collections, publishers’ digital textbooks, and faculty authoring their own materials. The presentation will demonstrate the services open to all as well as review the strategies to institutionalize affordable learning solutions within your campus culture and organization.

Gerard L. Hanley is the executive director of MERLOT (Multimedia Educational Resource for Learning and Online Teaching) and senior director for Academic Technology Services for the California State University, Office of the Chancellor. At MERLOT, he directs the development and sustainability of MERLOT’s innovative services and consortium of higher education institutions, professional societies, corporations, and other digital libraries. At the CSU, Gerry oversees the development and implementation of systemwide academic technology, digital library, and accessible technology initiatives supporting CSU’s 23 campuses. Previously held positions in the CSU include professor of psychology, director of faculty development and director of strategic planning.