Many scholarly writers are educated at the School of Hard Knocks, but it’s not the only school, or even the best. Much is known about how to become a better, more prolific scholar and anybody can. Even when you can’t work harder, there are important ways to work smarter. Research points to specific steps scholars can take to become better, more prolific scholars, including:

- Write daily for 15–30 minutes
- Organize around key sentences
- Solicit the right feedback from the right colleagues
- Make effective use of feedback

Previous participants who took these steps increased their scholarly productivity by a factor of three.

What previous participants say:

“Your methods changed my writing life. For the four years before the workshop, I wrote or revised 44 pages a year, but in the four years after, I wrote or revised 220 pages per year—five times as much!”

“In all honesty, you probably have provided me with all the tools I need to get tenure and even a full professorship.”

Tara Gray has used these steps to publish three books, including Publish & Flourish: Become a Prolific Scholar. She has presented this workshop to 5,000 participants in more than 30 of the United States, and in Guatemala, Mexico, and Canada.

Much is known about how to become more prolific and every scholar can. Why wait?
